We should have expected a lot from the voters in the last round of elections, they were all very important and gave a big boom to UKIP. The big news came from Catalonia where the pro-independence movement (Independentistas) won an overwhelming victory. Many things can be learned from this result: We all have to be clever and agile in order to take advantage of the situations we're in. In this case, it was the situation that the majority of Catalanian politicians have been promoting for a long time and have tried to execute in a very clever way: The disastrous economy they promised to create for Catalonia. All the politicians who were a part of the Yes movement (Catalonia wants to separate from Spain) and agreed to go along with this project said that if it was agreed with Madrid, it would create a crash with the Spanish economy and this would force Madrid to give a big economic assistance to the Catalan region. Well, it has happened and it did not work as expected. Madrid signed the budget but with a lot of reluctance and now the economy has responded
