Lymphedema management in the 21st century. Lymphedema is a complex, chronic condition caused by a mechanical obstruction or disruption in the lymphatic system. It has been estimated that up to 3% of the population in developed countries may be affected. Successful management of lymphedema requires a multidisciplinary approach and requires life-long commitment and education. Lymphedema is usually associated with other conditions such as infections, malignancies and obesity. The primary aims of lymphedema management are to achieve limb volume reduction and to maintain lower limb volume. Care is often provided by several practitioners including physical therapists, occupational therapists, nurses, podiatrists and physicians. The current review will highlight some of the advances in lymphedema management over the past several years. They include the use of modern imaging techniques, the implementation of lower limb compression therapy, the development of novel therapeutic modalities and advances in surgical techniques such as autologous lymphatic transplantation.
